A Momentous Session

Canada's parliament convenes today for one of the most momentous sessions in the history of the country. For no one denies that the Canadian people and the future of the Dominion have been plunged into the vortex by the extraordinary events of the past few weeks.

The situation is critical, first, because the safety and even the lives of thousands of our fighting men are at stake, depending upon the decision that is taken with respect to the use of draftees as reinforcements. This is the most delicate of decisions, for all political considerations fade into insignificance. Our fighting men must have adequate support in the field or Canada will lose her honor.

Then the situation is critical, in the second place, because a constitutional issue is clearly involved.

If Quebec has exerted pressure on Ottawa, in the matter of enforcing conscription, until Ottawa has bowed to the will of one section of the country, the entire constitutional picture is changed. It will have to be revised in the light of the possibility that such minority rule may have come to stay. Under these circumstances, Canada can no longer regard herself as a democracy.

Thus, the load on the consciences of the members of Parliament must be unusually heavy. It will be for them to say, in the immediate instance, what Canada's war record is to be and what form, in the future, Canada's political system is to take. It is to be hoped they will enter this session as courageous and independent men and women, not as Liberals and Conservatives and other party men, but as loyal and thoughtful Canadians.

First Home Leaves

If any Canadians deserve a holiday surely first claim belongs to the men who have spent five years overseas, and particularly those who have served in Italy, France and the Low Countries.

It is good news to everyone that these men are to get a thirty-day holiday, that four or five out of them will be back in time to spend Christmas with their relatives, other groups following in succession as transport facilities are supplied. They will be heartily welcomed, as they deserve to be.

They would be warmly welcomed if nothing more were known of them than that they were home; but they are not only home; they are home in safety, and from the sight of hungry people, ruined cities, countries struggling to emerge from the shadows of war, and from the sight of a world in which cupation and pillage by a merciless foe.

But their coming implies something else; that the war is now proceeding favorably. Otherwise men whose valor has been proved and who are rich in battle experience could not be spared from the fighting zone. Without exaggeration, the first group to come home, in the first introduction of a systematic leave arrangement, confirmatory evidence that the situation is now considered satisfactory.

Canada at Chicago

Canadians may well be proud of the part the Dominion has played and is playing in the international aviation conference now proceeding at Chicago. It is clear that Canada has been powerfully represented.

Although no agreement has yet been reached on some phases of post-war air policy, the principle of an international air convention, the principle of the free flight of the air, has emerged from the meetings held between the United States, Great Britain and Canada.

Such a regulatory authority was considered essential by Canada to make aviation development safe for all the nations large and small, particularly the latter. The tentative accord on this principle is essentially a triumph for this country.

Conversations are now proceeding in respect of the other aspects of air policy and on these the Canadian representatives have been working night and day to reconcile the views of the United States with those of Britain. The hope is that the final treaty, in addition to the international air administration agreement, which, as the Edmonton Bulletin has urged before, is highly vital, will be found on other matters of policy.

Canada has been most ably and successfully represented and the fact that the Dominion has been materially advanced by the conference.

The "Wall" Cracked

While nothing is more uncertain than war, news from the western front suggests that the great system of enemy defenses known as the Rhine is crumbling under the hammer blows of the Allied offensive and that the area may soon be in process of evacuation.

It was appropriate, and will signify something at Berlin, that the first Allied formation to reach the Rhine was a French task column. This cut through near the Swiss border to turn the southern end of the West Wall, and the British Second Army developed its turning movement at the northern end and the American Seventh, First, Third and Ninth armies jaded into the maze of fortifications between.

Perhaps the most important single initial gain was made by General Patton's troops in driving into the Saar basin. That is the heart of Germany's industrial area. If the advance there is exploited, the Siegfried defense network may be sliced across the middle, and the prime source of enemy munitions materials fall into Allied hands.

For whatever reason, enemy resistance was reported weak. The troops were delivered. This was a decision to abandon the whole of the Rhineland and fall back to the defense position east of the river if they, with the momentum the Allied forces have gained, the Nazis may have little choice in the matter.

Dr. Walter Zechlin, Nazi minister at Madrid, has been deprived of his German citizenship. The story is that he was ordered back to Berlin but refused to go. Knowing Himmler, the Dr. probably thought it was a choice between losing his citizenship and losing his head.

Nazi troops retreating before the Russians in Norway are reported to be coming back to go along with them as protection against attack by Allied airmen—rewarding their protectors, in true Nazi fashion, by giving them their property and burning their homes. Whoever is responsible for that peculiarly contemptible piece of villainy should have a place on the list of war criminals.

Chiang Kai-Shek has reconstructed his cabinet, and a government of 16 members, under pressure from the other Allies, particularly from the United States. He seems to have "fired" the right men, and since his object is to get the increased aid he badly needs it may be assumed that he has also appointed the right ones in their places. If so, China's fortunes have been put on a footing which should improve in that theatre from now on.

Looking Backward

From The Bulletin Files
1894: 50 Years Ago

The telegram received by the Board of Trade on Friday from the minister of commerce of the United States, was a very pleasant one, to the people of Edmonton and surrounding country. It was a confirmation of the fact that when on the spot from the assurances given the delegates who visited Edmonton, the fact of the government having planned itself to the construction of a bridge by asking permission for an appropriation for the purpose: from Mr. Daly's letter to the town council objecting to the bill critical of the government's action, and enquiries recently made by the public works committee of the city council, the fact that the ice bridge of the coming winter was to be succeeded by a government bridge, Mr. Daly's telegram may be taken as a notice that the government was really serious and bridge is built, it may hope to live long enough to see it built.

Ontario dispatch says: There is great activity among the several departments of the government just now in the way of giving out contracts for public works and expending public money for improvements. All these things and others point to the fact that the government is now in the old policy of preparing for a general election.

War's Purposes Have Changed

Perhaps Neither Party Is Fulfilling the Will of God
By DOROTHY THOMPSON

In the papers of Abraham Lincoln, there is an amazing passage written for no other eyes than his own. Though it is not in the second inaugural address, it is in a letter to a friend of the civil war, which seemed to be dragging out endlessly, despite the weight of the world's weight and power that was with the north. Lincoln claims to act in accordance with the will of God. He says that he must be wrong. God cannot be for and against the same thing at the same time. In the present war it is quite possible that God's purpose is something different from the purpose of the other party. It is almost ready to say that this is probably true. That God will not stand back and will that it shall not end yet. By His mere great power He could have saved or destroyed the Union without a human cost. Yet the contest lingers. And having been he could give the world a better peace than it has yet known.

Killed in Action See Big Influx Of Settlers to Peace Country

A great influx of settlers is expected to the Peace River country after the war providing sufficient good roads and additional railway outlets, it is expected. Mr. Bessent, Peace River district representative of the Associated Builders of Trade, said on his arrival here from the north.

Mr. Bessent goes to Calgary as the representative of the Peace River district to a meeting of the Alberta-B.C. joint committee of Boards of Trade.

The delegation from Edmonton is headed by President James Walker of the Associated Builders of Trade.

Survey is now completed on the Peace River highway from Dawson Creek to Prince George and it is expected this route will be completed by next fall. The distance is about 200 miles and is a project of the federal government, but will cost about $60,000.

Settlement of much fine land still to be opened up in the Peace River country would naturally follow, but it will be served by additional railway outlets, Mr. Bessent said.

Some of the work on roads has done a lot of work on roads in the Peace River country. The Peace River district representative of the Associated Builders of Trade, said on his arrival here from the north.

At East Post Rehabilitation Group Receives Varied Reports

There was a very representative gathering of members of the Edmonton Citizens' Rehabilitation Council at the monthly meeting held in the War Services Council board room, on Monday.

D. E. Mould occupied the chair, and Dr. D. G. MacQueen, superintendent, department of veterans' affairs, was the guest speaker.

Dr. MacQueen was introduced by Walter R. McLaren, welfare officer, who mentioned that Dr. MacQueen was also a medical officer for this district for his department.

Dr. MacQueen spoke on the medical treatment available to ex-servicemen, service men who have been referred to his department, and others (like the RCMP) whose medical treatment is the responsibility of the Dominion government. He said that the Air Force, the Army and the Navy treated their own men, unless his department was requested specially to take care of them.

Bar to DFC Social Credit To Open Here

Answering a summons issued by Premier Ernest Manning some weeks ago, 31 Social Credit members of the Alberta Legislature will meet here Thursday and Friday for the annual fall caucus.

The caucus will mark the first time since the Aug. 8 provincial election that Social Credit members have met together. Most are now in the city, attending the annual convention of the Alberta Social Credit League.

Members of the caucus will choose their officers for the next five years, or the life of the new legislature. Last chairman of the body was James Hartley, MLA for Macleod.

Mr. Hartley, MLA for Macleod, will be the speaker at the caucus.

One probable item of business will be nomination by members of a speaker for the next assembly. Observers expect the post will go to the late, Peter Dawson, MLA for Little River, who has been speaker since 1937, when he took over from Hon. N. Tannan, minister of lands and mines.

While the speaker is elected by the caucus, the speaker is named in advance of the party holding power in the legislature. The Social Credit members in the House out of 60 there is no chance the speaker will be elected by the caucus, but would be elected by the caucus.

THE ANSWERS
GORDON NEWTON, I'll be glad to talk into civics I won't be worrying about the wigs in fashions or trends. They say women are the ones who like fancy clothes but, believe me, after three years of uniform, I want some fancy clothes too. I don't bother about a necktie or no. All I want is a change of clothing when I feel like it.
